The Ghost Costume Trick

A SharkBoat AI Storybook

On Halloween night, a little ghost went tiptoeing from house to house.
The ghost said, “Boo!” in a tiny voice.

Each door opened with a creak. The grown-ups and children all gasped and stared.

“Oh my!” they whispered. “A real ghost!” They hurried back inside and left their candy behind.

The little ghost looked around. So much candy was waiting, all in neat little piles.

The ghost gave a shy little wave and toddled on. The blanket fluttered softly in the night air.

At the end of the street, the moon came out bright and round. The ghost paused beside a lamppost and giggled.

Then the blanket slipped a little. A neighbor peeked closer and saw a sleepy child smiling underneath.

“It’s not a ghost at all,” everyone laughed. It was just a little kid in a blanket, ready for candy and bed.
