

Hugo Hedgehog's Harvest Tea

A SharkBoat AI Storybook

Under the harvest moon so bright,
Hugo waddled into sight.
He carried cups with care and cheer,
For kind friends were gathering near.

He set the table, neat and low,
With buns and berries all aglow.
A teapot steamed in silver light,
And lanterns twinkled soft and white.

The bunny came with happy feet,
The mouse arrived with pebbled treat.
The robin bowed with feathered grace,
And smiles shone on every face.

They sipped warm tea and nibbled scones,
And shared sweet laughs in gentle tones.
The moon looked down on every part,
And filled the garden full of heart.

A chilly breeze began to blow,
And made the candle flames tip low.
But Hugo smiled and softly said,
“Let’s tuck the tea beneath this shed.”

They moved the cloths and cups with care,
And found a snug and cozy lair.
The harvest moon still shone above,
While every guest felt safe with love.

Then one by one they yawned so wide,
And leaned in close with sleepy pride.
They thanked their friend for moonlit cheer,
And hummed a tune so soft and clear.

Hugo waved and said goodnight,
Beneath the moon so golden-bright.
With kind new memories in his heart,
He dreamed of tea and friends before start.
