Milo's Bright Back-to-School Day

A SharkBoat AI Storybook

Milo packed his bag with care,
A pencil, books, and lunch to share.
He hopped outside with a happy grin,
Ready for school to now begin.

The bus rolled in with a cheery hum,
It seemed to say, "Come, come, come!"
Milo climbed aboard with a merry race,
And found a sunny window place.

At school, the halls were bright and wide,
With pictures, colors, side by side.
Milo waved to friends he knew,
And all their smiles were warm and true.

The teacher sang, "Let's learn today!"
With letters, numbers, work, and play.
Milo listened, then raised his paw,
Finding fun in every law.

He counted blocks, one, two, three,
Then drew a star so bright to see.
With every game and every page,
Milo felt a growing spark of courage.

At lunch, they shared a crunchy treat,
And traded stories, nice and sweet.
Milo laughed and took a bite,
His tummy full, his heart felt light.

Outside, they ran and jumped so high,
They nearly tickled up the sky.
Milo played till the bell rang clear,
With joyful friends all gathered near.

When day was done, he headed home,
With tales of all the things he'd known.
Back to school was fun, it seemed,
A place where happy learning gleamed.